Reading practice booklet: Grade 7 expectations

Grade 7 · Practice booklet

Name: _____

What this booklet is

This is general practice written for Reading at Grade 7 level, following the Common Core State Standards for English Language Arts standards for that grade. It is not made from your child's MAP questions, and it does not replace the classroom. Use it as a guide to what a child is expected to know and do at this level.

How to use it

- Do one section at a time, about 10 minutes, 3 days a week. Stop while it is still enjoyable.
- Read each question all the way through, twice, before answering. Underline the key words and say what is being asked.
- Take your time. A careful, correct answer is worth more than a fast one.
- Use scrap paper and show the working. Then check the answer before moving on.
- Ask your child to explain how they got an answer, even when it is right.
- If a section feels too hard, do the section before it again, or ask the teacher. That is part of learning, not a problem.

Section 1: Word meanings and how writers use words

Standards practised: RL.7.4, L.7.4a, L.7.4b, L.7.5a, L.7.5c

A worked example

Read: "The old bridge was sturdy, but the new one was flimsy." Using the clue "but", what does flimsy mean?

1. Look at the word "but": it signals a contrast with "sturdy".
2. Sturdy means strong and solid, so the opposite idea, flimsy, must mean easily damaged or broken.

Flimsy means easily damaged or broken.

Dawn at the Harbour

Maryam arrived at the harbour with her father and her little brother before the sun had properly risen. The sky was the colour of a pale peach, and the water lay so still that it seemed to be holding its breath. Her grandfather Hamdan's fishing boat rocked gently beside the pier, its paint faded and peeling, but he spoke of it with the fondness other people keep for an old friend.

"She is not elegant," he said, patting the rail, "but she is dependable. She has never once let me down."

Maryam smiled at the word. Grandfather Hamdan was a man of few words, and he chose each one with care. When other fishermen hurried past, shouting and clattering their crates, he moved slowly and deliberately, checking every knot in the net. Some of the younger men called him stubborn, but Maryam thought the word too harsh. To her, he was determined, a man who would not give up a good habit just because it was old.

A thin cat, scrawny and watchful, crept along the pier and stared at the buckets. A moment later a gull landed, and the cat slunk away, as if it had never been interested at all. Maryam laughed. The gull strutted up and down like a tiny king inspecting his kingdom.

As the boat slid out of the harbour, the engine coughed, then settled into a steady hum. The water turned from grey to green and then to a deep, glittering blue.

Maryam leaned over the side. The sea was so transparent that she could see the sandy bottom and a shoal of silver fish darting like scattered coins.

"My father taught me to read the water," Grandfather Hamdan said. "When it is dark and ruffled, the fish are hiding. When it is smooth, they are feeding." Maryam had been reluctant to come, unsure whether she would enjoy a whole morning with nothing to do but wait. Now, with the cool wind in her hair and the salty tang of the sea on her lips, she wanted the morning to last forever.

By the time they returned, the harbour had woken. Porters wheeled crates of fish toward the market, and the word transport suddenly made sense to her: port means to carry, and trans means across, so to transport is to carry something across from one place to another. The air smelled of salt, diesel and fresh bread from a nearby bakery, a warm and comforting mix. Grandfather Hamdan gave her a single silver fish to take home. "A small catch," he said, "but an honest one."

Maryam held it carefully the whole way back, as though it were a treasure.

Questions

1. Grandfather Hamdan "moved slowly and deliberately, checking every knot in the net." Using the context, what does deliberately mean?

   A. Loudly and in a hurry

   B. Carefully and on purpose

   C. Sadly and without hope

   D. Carelessly and by accident

2. Grandfather Hamdan calls his boat "dependable" and says "she has never once let me down." What does dependable mean?

   A. Old and faded

   B. Fast and powerful

   C. Beautiful and elegant

   D. Able to be trusted

3. Some men call Grandfather Hamdan "stubborn", but Maryam prefers "determined". How do the feelings of the two words differ?

4. "The water lay so still that it seemed to be holding its breath." What kind of figurative language is this, and what does it suggest?

5. "The gull strutted up and down like a tiny king inspecting his kingdom." What does this simile tell you about the gull?

   A. It walked proudly, as if it owned the place

   B. It was afraid of the cat

   C. It was hungry and searching for food

   D. It was much larger than a king

6. The cat "slunk away, as if it had never been interested." What does slunk suggest that the word walked would not?

7. The sea was "transparent" so Maryam could see the bottom. What does transparent mean?

   A. Deep and dark

   B. Clear enough to see through

   C. Warm and calm

   D. Salty and cold

8. The fish were "darting like scattered coins." What two things does this simile tell you about the fish?

---

9. Maryam was "reluctant" to come. Which meaning fits best, using the words "unsure whether she would enjoy"?

   A. Excited and ready

   B. Unwilling or not keen

   C. Angry and loud

   D. Tired and sleepy

10. The passage explains that port means "to carry" and trans means "across". What does the word transport mean, and what would a porter do?

---

11. At the end, Maryam held the fish "as though it were a treasure." Why does the author choose this comparison?

---

Section 2: Reading nonfiction

Standards practised: RI.7.1, RI.7.2, RI.7.3, RI.7.4, RI.7.5, RI.7.8

A worked example

Read: "Solar panels turn sunlight into power. They need no fuel, they make no smoke, and they last for many years. For these reasons, solar power is a good choice." What is the author's claim, and what is the evidence?

1. A claim is what the author wants you to believe. Look for the "for these reasons" sentence: solar power is a good choice.
2. Evidence is the facts that support the claim: no fuel, no smoke, and a long life.

Claim: solar power is a good choice. Evidence: it needs no fuel, makes no smoke and lasts many years.

Bringing Back the Arabian Oryx

Few animals show the power of careful planning as clearly as the Arabian oryx. This graceful antelope, with its pale coat and long, straight horns, once roamed the deserts of the Arabian Peninsula in large numbers. It is well suited to life in the sand. Its light colour reflects the sun, its wide hooves keep it from sinking, and it can go many days without drinking, getting most of its water from the plants it eats.

Sadly, these strengths could not protect the oryx from people. Hunters took more animals than the herds could replace, and vehicles made it easy to chase them across open ground. By the early 1970s, no oryx remained in the wild. The species had disappeared from the places where it had lived for thousands of years.

The story did not end there, because a few oryx survived in zoos and private collections. Conservationists gathered these animals and began breeding programmes. The first aim was simple: grow a healthy herd that could one day return to the desert. Later, oryx were released into protected areas in Oman, and other countries, including the UAE, created protected reserves where herds could live safely. Rangers watch over the animals, provide water in dry seasons, and keep records of every birth.

The results have been encouraging. In recent years, the international group that tracks threatened species moved the Arabian oryx from "Endangered" to "Vulnerable", a lower level of risk. Today thousands of oryx live in reserves, in breeding centres and in the wild.

Some people argue that money spent on animals would be better spent on human needs. This view deserves respect, but it overlooks an important fact: protecting the oryx also protects its habitat. Reserves keep desert plants growing, which helps other animals, from gazelles to insects. Reserves also give local people jobs as rangers and guides. Therefore the oryx programme serves both wildlife and communities.

The work is not finished. Oryx still face threats, and a reserve needs constant care. Yet the journey from extinction in the wild to thousands of living animals proves that determined, patient action can repair some of the damage people have caused. The oryx is not only a symbol of the desert; it is evidence that recovery is possible.

Questions

1. What is the central idea of the passage?

   A. Hunters should be stopped from visiting the desert

   B. The oryx is the fastest animal in the desert

   C. Careful conservation work has helped the oryx return, showing recovery is possible

   D. Zoos are the best place for all wild animals

2. Name two features that help the oryx live in the desert.

3. According to the passage, why did the oryx disappear from the wild?

   A. Hunters took more than the herds could replace, and vehicles made chasing easy

   B. The desert became too wet for the plants it eats

   C. Its wide hooves made it sink in the sand

   D. Reserves were closed in the early 1970s

4. How did the oryx that survived in zoos and private collections help the species?

5. What did the change from "Endangered" to "Vulnerable" show?
   A. The oryx had moved to a new country
   B. Fewer oryx were living in reserves
   C. Rangers had stopped keeping records
   D. The oryx was at a lower level of risk

6. What does the author mean by saying the opposing view "overlooks" an important fact?
   A. It repeats the fact too often
   B. It misses the fact or does not think about it
   C. It explains the fact clearly
   D. It disagrees with the fact on purpose

7. What is the opposing argument the author mentions in paragraph 5?

8. How does the author answer that opposing argument? Give two pieces of evidence.

---

9. How does paragraph 2 connect to paragraph 3?
   A. Paragraph 2 gives the solution and paragraph 3 gives the problem
   B. Both paragraphs describe how the oryx lives in the sand
   C. Paragraph 2 explains the problem and paragraph 3 explains the solution
   D. Paragraph 2 gives an opinion and paragraph 3 gives a joke

10. Which facts from the passage best support the final claim that "recovery is possible"?

11. Does the author say the work is finished? Use the passage to explain why this matters to the argument.

---

Section 3: Stories, poems and plays

Standards practised: RL.7.1, RL.7.2, RL.7.3, RL.7.4, RL.7.6

A worked example

Read: "The ferry did not arrive, so Hind walked along the creek to the next crossing and met an old friend there." How did the setting shape what happened?

1. Ask what the setting is: a creek where a ferry should arrive.
2. Ask what problem the setting caused: the ferry did not come.
3. That problem made Hind walk to another crossing, which led to meeting her friend.

The missing ferry at the creek made Hind walk to another crossing, where she met her friend.

The Flat Tyre

I stared at the dashboard clock for the fourth time. We were meant to reach my cousin Noura's house in Liwa before sunset, because tonight was the family gathering, and I had promised to bring the dessert I had made myself. Then the car gave a loud thump, shuddered, and rolled to a stop at the edge of the road.

"Flat tyre," Baba said calmly, as if he were reporting the weather.

I groaned. Outside, the dunes rose on every side, orange and enormous, and the afternoon heat shimmered above the road. There was no shop, no house, not even a tree. "We will be late," I said. "Everything will be ruined."

Baba only smiled. He opened the boot and began to unpack the tools. I sat in the shade of the open door, hugging the box of dessert, and I felt sure that no one in the world had ever had a worse day.

Then the quiet settled around us, and I noticed things I had not seen from the speeding car. A beetle crossed the sand, leaving a neat line of tiny footprints like stitching on a cloth. The wind whispered over the dune crests and sent ribbons of sand sliding down their sides. High above, a falcon turned wide circles in the pale sky.

"Look," Baba said softly, pointing. I looked up. Far across the dunes, a line of camels was walking in single file, their herder a small dark figure beside them. I watched until they vanished over a ridge. I had lived in this country all my life, yet I could not remember ever simply watching it.

A truck slowed beside us. The driver, a young man with a friendly face, jumped out and helped Baba lift the heavy spare tyre into place. "We all get stuck sometimes," he said, refusing the money Baba offered. "Just help the next person."

By the time we reached Noura's house, the sun was setting and the lamps were already lit. I braced myself for disapproval. Instead, Noura hugged me and said, "You are just in time." The dessert was a little squashed, but everyone ate it anyway, and Baba told the story of the flat tyre, making the beetle sound like a hero.

Later, lying on the roof under a crowd of stars, I realised that the worst part of my day had given me the best part. I had been so busy hurrying toward the evening that I had almost missed the afternoon.

Questions

1. Why was the narrator worried about being late?

   A. There was a family gathering that evening and the narrator had promised a dessert

   B. The narrator had to catch a flight at sunset

   C. The narrator did not like the desert

   D. Baba had forgotten the tools

2. Who is telling the story, and how do you know?

3. How do the narrator and Baba react differently to the flat tyre?

   A. Both are upset, but Baba shows it more

   B. The narrator is calm and Baba is upset

   C. Both stay calm and say nothing

   D. The narrator is upset and Baba stays calm

4. How does the desert setting shape the plot after the car stops?

5. List two things the narrator notices while waiting.

6. "Tiny footprints like stitching on a cloth." What does this simile show about the beetle's tracks?

   A. They were deep and messy

   B. They were small, neat and in a regular line

   C. They were far apart and hard to see

   D. They were soft like cloth

7. Why does the narrator say, "I could not remember ever simply watching it"?

8. Why does the truck driver refuse the money, and what does he ask instead?

9. What does "I braced myself for disapproval" tell you about the narrator's feelings?

   A. The narrator was proud and sure of a welcome

   B. The narrator was bored and sleepy

   C. The narrator was nervous and expected to be scolded

   D. The narrator was angry with Noura

10. How does Noura's welcome differ from what the narrator expected?

    A. Noura hugged the narrator and said it was just in time, not scolding

    B. Noura scolded the narrator for the squashed dessert

    C. Noura did not notice that the narrator had arrived

    D. Noura asked the narrator to go home

11. Explain the last sentence: "I had almost missed the afternoon."

12. State a theme of the story and support it with two details.

Answer guide for parents

Section 1: Word meanings and how writers use words

1. B. Carefully and on purpose. He moved slowly and checked every knot, so deliberately means carefully and on purpose. If your child chose A (loudly and in a hurry), they picked the way the other fishermen behaved, not Grandfather Hamdan.
2. D. Able to be trusted. She has never let him down, so dependable means able to be trusted. If your child chose A (old and faded), they chose a detail about how the boat looks, not what the clue says.
3. A good answer says stubborn feels negative (refusing to change for no good reason) and determined feels positive (keeping firmly to a good aim). Ask: which word would you like to be called, and why?
4. A good answer says personification, because the water is given a human action, holding its breath, and it shows the harbour was very calm and quiet. Ask: can water really hold its breath?
5. A. It walked proudly, as if it owned the place. A king inspecting his kingdom walks proudly, so the gull seemed proud and important. If your child chose B (it was afraid of the cat), they chose a link from the earlier sentence, but this simile is about how the gull walked.
6. A good answer says slunk suggests moving quietly and a little guiltily, trying not to be noticed, which walked does not. Ask: how would a cat move if it were not embarrassed?
7. C. Warm and calm. She could see the sandy bottom, so transparent means clear enough to see through. If your child chose A (deep and dark), they chose a word that goes with the sea, but dark water would hide the bottom.
8. A good answer gives two things: the fish were silver and shiny like coins, and they moved quickly in different directions. Ask: which words in the simile tell you about the movement?
9. B. Unwilling or not keen. The words "unsure whether she would enjoy" show she did not want to come, so reluctant means unwilling. If your child chose A (excited and ready), they chose the opposite, so ask who is unsure about enjoying something.
10. A good answer says transport means to carry across from one place to another, and a porter carries things such as crates of fish. Ask: which two word parts did the passage explain?
11. A good answer says she valued the small gift and the memory of the morning very much, even though the fish was small. Ask: how would you hold something you treasure?

Section 2: Reading nonfiction

1. C. Careful conservation work has helped the oryx return, showing recovery is possible. The whole passage follows the oryx from vanishing in the wild to thousands alive, and the last paragraph says recovery is possible. If your child chose A (hunters should be stopped), they chose a detail from one paragraph, not the idea of the whole passage.
2. A good answer names any two of these from paragraph one: a light coat that reflects the sun, wide hooves that stop it sinking, going many days without drinking. Ask: which sentences in paragraph one tell you?
3. A. Hunters took more than the herds could replace, and vehicles made chasing easy. Paragraph two says hunters took more than the herds could replace and vehicles made chasing easy. If your child chose C (its wide hooves made it sink), they chose a strength of the oryx from paragraph one, not a cause.

4. A good answer says the surviving oryx were gathered for breeding programmes to grow a healthy herd that could return to the desert. Ask: what happened to the herd later?
5. D. The oryx was at a lower level of risk. Vulnerable is a lower level of risk than Endangered, so the recovery work was succeeding. If your child chose B (fewer oryx in reserves), they read the change as bad news, but a lower risk level is good news.
6. B. It misses the fact or does not think about it. To overlook something means to miss it or not think about it, and the author then names the fact that was missed. If your child chose D (it disagrees with the fact on purpose), they chose a meaning that sounds like arguing, but overlook means miss.
7. A good answer says the opposing argument is that money spent on animals would be better spent on human needs. Ask: which sentence in paragraph five starts with "Some people argue"?
8. A good answer gives two pieces of evidence: protecting the oryx protects its habitat, which helps gazelles and insects, and reserves give local people jobs as rangers and guides. Ask: what else does protecting the oryx protect?
9. C. Paragraph 2 explains the problem and paragraph 3 explains the solution. Paragraph two tells the problem, the oryx vanishing, and paragraph three gives the answer, breeding programmes and reserves. If your child chose A (problem and solution swapped), they put the two paragraphs in the wrong order.
10. A good answer uses the contrast: no oryx in the wild in the early 1970s, yet today thousands live in reserves, breeding centres and the wild. Ask: what was the situation then, and what is it now?
11. A good answer says no, oryx still face threats and reserves need constant care, which makes the argument honest and shows effort must continue. Ask: which sentence in the last paragraph says the work is not finished?

Section 3: Stories, poems and plays

1. A. There was a family gathering that evening and the narrator had promised a dessert. The first paragraph says tonight was the family gathering and the narrator had promised the dessert. If your child chose B (catch a flight at sunset), they took sunset, which is only the time they hoped to arrive, and made up a reason.
2. A good answer says the narrator tells it in the first person, using "I", "my" and "me". Ask: which words in the first paragraph show the narrator is part of the story?
3. D. The narrator is upset and Baba stays calm. The narrator groans and says everything will be ruined, while Baba speaks calmly and smiles. If your child chose B (the narrator is calm and Baba is upset), they swapped the two people, so check who groans.
4. A good answer says there was no shop or house, so they had to fix the tyre themselves and wait, which let the narrator notice the desert and a driver stop to help. Ask: what would be different in a city?
5. A good answer names any two things the narrator notices: the beetle's tracks, the wind and sliding sand, the falcon, the camels. Ask: where in the text did you find each one?
6. B. They were small, neat and in a regular line. Stitching is small, neat and in a line, so the beetle's tracks were too. If your child chose D (soft like cloth), they took the word cloth literally instead of the comparison to stitching.

7. A good answer says the narrator had always hurried past the desert and never stopped to look closely. Ask: what made the narrator stop and look this time?
8. A good answer says the driver believes people should help each other, and he asks Baba to help the next person instead of paying. Ask: what does he mean by "the next person"?
9. C. The narrator was nervous and expected to be scolded. To brace yourself is to get ready for something unpleasant, so the narrator expected a scolding. If your child chose A (proud and sure of a welcome), they read brace as feeling confident, but bracing means preparing for bad news.
10. A. Noura hugged the narrator and said it was just in time, not scolding. The narrator expected disapproval, but Noura hugged the narrator and said "You are just in time." If your child chose B (Noura scolded about the dessert), they chose what the narrator feared, not what happened.
11. A good answer says the narrator was so focused on reaching the evening that the pleasure of the afternoon in the desert nearly went unnoticed. Ask: what did the narrator almost miss?
12. A good answer states a theme such as slowing down or accepting delays can bring good things, with two details like noticing the beetle and camels, and Noura saying "just in time". Ask: which details show that?
